

Challenging homophobia: does every child matter?

Exploring teachers' views
on challenging homophobia

The General Teaching Council for England is hosting a major online discussion to explore teachers' views on challenging homophobia and ensuring sexualities equality in schools. We are hoping for an open frank exchange of views amongst professionals.

The discussion forums are running from 30 January to 30 April 2006. Go to www.gtce.org.uk/challengeforum to join the debate and speak out.

The online forums are contributing to a three year research project being led by Dr Elizabeth Atkinson and Dr Renée Hayes from the University of Sunderland. As such the forums, which will allow contributors to participate anonymously, will contribute to the debate about challenging homophobia and to the development of the knowledge base around schooling and sexual orientation.

The opening of the forum marks both the first anniversary of the launch of the Stonewall-led 'Education for All' campaign to challenge homophobia in schools and the second UK Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual and Transgender (LGBT) History Month, which takes place in February 2006.

Join in and speak out! www.gtce.org.uk/challengeforum

Challenging homophobia: does every child matter?

Exploring teachers' views
on challenging homophobia

The General Teaching Council for England is hosting a major online discussion to explore teachers' views on challenging homophobia and ensuring sexualities equality in schools. We are hoping for an open frank exchange of views amongst professionals.

The discussion forums are running from 30 January to 30 April 2006. Go to www.gtce.org.uk/challengeforum to join the debate and speak out.

The online forums are contributing to a three year research project being led by Dr Elizabeth Atkinson and Dr Renée Hayes from the University of Sunderland. As such the forums, which will allow contributors to participate anonymously, will contribute to the debate about challenging homophobia and to the development of the knowledge base around schooling and sexual orientation.

The opening of the forum marks both the first anniversary of the launch of the Stonewall-led 'Education for All' campaign to challenge homophobia in schools and the second UK Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual and Transgender (LGBT) History Month, which takes place in February 2006.

Join in and speak out! www.gtce.org.uk/challengeforum